Houston Executive Airport Hosts Inaugural Fly-In
Saturday, March 31 11 AM to 5 PM

BROOKSHIRE -- (February 26, 2007) – Newly opened Houston Executive Airport will host its inaugural Barbecue Fly-In Saturday, March 31. Area pilots and business travelers are invited to the free event scheduled from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Houston Executive Airport, 1900 Cardiff Road in Brookshire, Texas just west of Houston. Visitors will enjoy a complimentary barbecue lunch and airport staff will provide tours of the new business aviation center.

After more than 2 years of planning and construction, Houston Executive Airport opened for business in January 2007. Airport Executive Director, Andrew D. Perry, A.A.E., said the airport's convenient location along the energy corridor, and close proximity to Houston makes it highly desirable for business travelers.

"We are delighted to welcome area pilots to Houston Executive Airport," said Perry. "We established this airport to meet the growing needs of business travelers to Houston and we look forward to establishing HEA as a first-class aviation center – not only meeting their needs, but also exceeding them."

Perry said a feature of Houston Executive Airport is Henriksen Jet Center. "Henriksen Jet Center will provide services such as aircraft fueling, ground handling operations, rental cars and all the amenities needed to provide premium service for the business air traveler visiting West Houston," said Perry. Chevron Global Aviation was recently named the airport's fuel supplier.
